Philip Elting Honored At Testimonial Dinner

His Friends Meet at Hotel Stuyvesant to Pay Tribute of Appreciation to County's Most Prominent Citizen Upon His Second Appointment as Collector of the Port of New York—Speakers Testify to His Endearing Qualities.

More than 300 Ulster county friends of Philip Elting joined in giving a testimonial dinner Saturday evening at The Stuyvesant in recognition of Mr. Elting's second appointment as collector of the port of New York. Scores of applications for tickets had to be rejected because of the limited number that could be seated and as it was, not only was the large dining room filled, but tables in the corridors and adjoining rooms were set in order to provide for those who attended this most sincere and heartfelt expression of respect and admiration for Ulster county's most prominent citizen. As will be realized by anyone who reads the list printed in another column, those present were a cross section of Ulster county's men including those of every race and station and representing every religious and political creed in the county.

Intended as a surprise, complete secrecy could not be maintained and the guest of honor had something more than an inkling of what was to occur, although the magnitude of it and the depth and very evident sincerity of the tribute were a surprise and, to him, a mystery beyond comprehension. Not only in his brief speech was this shown, but in conversations with friends afterward the burden of Mr. Elting's remarks was "What have I ever done to deserve this?" Everyone except Philip Elting knows the answer as was made clear by the various speakers.

The affair originated with Everett Fowler and the entire management was in the hands of Mr. Fowler and M. H. Herzog, with D. N. Mathews as treasurer. The dining room was beautifully decorated for the occasion and conspicuous on the speakers' table was a large basket of flowers sent by the National Republican Club, of which Mr. Elting is a member, from New York city. The music was by Maisenhelder's Orchestra. The souvenirs were folders with the list of speakers, enclosing a large photograph of Mr. Elting by the Pennington studio. Serving of the dinner began promptly at the time announced, 7:30, following the blessing asked by the Very Rev. Joseph B Scully, rector of St Mary's Catholic Church, the following menu was served:

Oyster Cocktail
Tomato Puree Au Riz
Hearts of Celery Queen Olives
Roast Young Vermont Turkey
Cranberry Sauce
Crushed Potatoes Wax Beans
Celery Salad
Vanilla Ice Cream Assorted Cakes
Demi-Tasse
Cigars Cigarettes

After the cigars and coffee sufficient tables were removed to enable all to take seats in the dining room and at 9:25 Judge Hasbrouck, the toastmaster began the opening address.

Tribute by Judge Hasbrouck.

Judge Hasbrouck spoke as follows:

One of the odd provisions of the Constitutions of the United States is that found in Section IX of Art. I., that

"That no title of nobility shall be granted by the United States: and no person holding any office of profit or trust under them, shall, without the consent of the Congress, accept of any present, emolument, office, or title, of any kind whatever from any king, prince or foreign state."

Our country, Republican in form of government, is recognized the world over as a democracy.

The provision of the constitution above pointed out seems to place a limitation on the distinctions that may be obtained in our democracy. In the absence of titles of nobility conferred by the government or conferred by foreign potentates other doors must be knocked at and opened by the member of the great mass of our citizenry who desires to obtain distinction.

I have not now in mind those distinctions which are odious. I am only concentrating upon such as appeal to the favor of our fellows.

An enumeration of the distinctions which men and women may earn in our Republic are too numerous and varied to serve the purpose of the target at which I am aiming tonight.

Illustrative of distinctions I may mention that General Grant had great distinction in the war for the Union. Essayists and military experts of foreign countries have depreciated him as a warrior. Yet he has retained his distinction as a great soldier. Where the commanders of the Union Armies had scored failures after failures, he had won victory after victory. He blazed a veritable way of glory from Paducah to Appomattox.

Yet more distinguished in the other field of public life was our great war President. He earned distinction that has made his face an emblem of liberty and freedom the world over. In our democracy the distinction he won was rather of the heart than of the head. He lived for freedom and died that it might not perish from the earth. His life, so recently given the tribute of a nation's homage on his birthday, rose to sublimities almost unknown in human nature in the practice of those ordinary daily services inspired by a love for and tolerance of the weaknesses of our poor human nature. He spent his life in glorious service.

In twenty centuries the earth has produced no man save one who has been so deified in human hearts as Abraham Lincoln.

Of the men of the present day who have won distinction in our democracy it seems to me that Herbert Hoover stands out most prominently. Better than any man he has known and understood the needs of bleeding humanity at the close of the World War. It fell to him to heal the sick, clothe the naked and feed the poor. He marshalled the philanthropy of nations to accomplish that result. Distinctions are many but that distinction to me appears to be the most sublime which repudiates the philosophy of Nietche in which only the strong are exalted and cleaves to that which pours balm into human hearts and brings healing to human distress.

Chiefest is Servant of All.

Men may become distinguished as inventors, essayists, as orators and as preachers, as financiers and statesmen; yet it seems to me that it is now as it was in the days of the gospel that he who would be chiefest among us should be the servant of all.

There is a significance in our gathering tonight. So many men of purpose and substance in our county could not be brought together unless some idea ruled their coming. There is a distinction in democracy which I have not yet mentioned. It is the distinction of good citizenship. To me that citizen who entertains veneration for his home, cares for his household, regards his neighbor with genuine concern and helpfulness as the obligation of the relation; who has pride in the locality in which he lives, loyalty and patriotism for his state and nation, reverence for God and support for sacred institutions, strives to love his neighbor as himself, is worthy of our emulation and of our praise. Such a citizenship is entitled to give the possessor distinction in democracy.

Putting Virtues in Practice.

My individual reaction is favorable to that citizenship which not only possesses the virtues I have indicated but practices them. An individual who comes into power in our republic, whose head refuses to swell, who realizes that that government is best which brings the greatest satisfaction to individual needs, who spends himself and his power in the service of his fellows, merits our approval and acclamation.

Our ancient city and county have in the past produced men of distinction, public servants of great power and many have come and gone without any sign from the mass of their fellows that any sense of appreciation lodged with them.

We owe much to Captain Everett Fowler. He has led us on other occasions and is leading us tonight to give concrete expression to the feelings of our heart towards a fellow citizen who has served well.

Delighting in Service.

A fellow-citizen who has been willing to fetch and carry for his neighbors and friends, who has cooled his heels before the seats of the mighty to succeed in tempering the wind to the shorn lamb or winning justice or relief for the oppressed or distressed, impresses us. His willingness to serve and his delight in the way reveal the character of the citizenship upon which we have set an approval tonight.

Thus with party lines obliterated we are fraternizing. So I shall not praise the politician. I shall not praise the lawyer. I shall not praise the banker. I shall not praise the holder of the great financial office next to the treasury of the country itself. Tonight we lift our glasses to the plain, honest, serviceable, human neighbor and friend, Philip Elting.

Referring to him as "The Gamaliel at whose feet I sat" and quoting from Tasso's "Jerusalem Delivered" the lines beginning "And thou, Alphonso, who from Fortune's schools," the toastmaster introduced Judge Clearwater, who made the presentation speech and formally presented to Mr. Elting on behalf of the assemblage a diamond stick pin and cuff buttons and the illuminated list of friends described in another column.

Judge Clearwater Makes Presentation

Judge Clearwater said in part:

It was the fine custom of the nations of antiquity when highly they wished to honor a citizen to bestow

Great Effort to Defend Shanghai

Extensive Reinforcements from Shantung Province Restore Confidence in Marshal Sun's Forces—1,000 More British Marines Arrive.

Shanghai, Feb. 28 (AP).—Confidence having been restored to the shaken forces of Marshal Sun-Chuan-Fang by the arrival of extensive reinforcements from Shantung province, defense preparations to prevent Shanghai, richest military prize of the Orient, from falling into Nationalist hands, progressed on a large scale today.

Principal activities centered at Sungkiang, strategic point 28 miles south of here. Preparations included the construction of battery positions, indicating that the northerners, once reported on the verge of losing Sungkiang, had the situation in hand there and were prepared to make a definite stand against the Nationalist advance.

Marshal Sun and General Chang Tsung-Chang, commander of the northern reinforcements, returned today from the battlefront. While there Sun addressed four thousand of his troops, telling them that they were now united with the Shantungese to fight Bolshevism.

Supplementing the land preparations, and as a precaution against a Nationalist attack on Shanghai by water, defense commissioner Li Pao-Chang yesterday ordered the Woosung entrance of the Whangpoo river, which is the only approach to the city from the Yangtze delta closed from 6 p. m., to 6 a. m.

The consular body immediately protested the regulation, pointing out that a vast amount of shipping enters and leaves the harbor as the tides dictate and cannot be interfered with. Latest indications were that a compromise would be effected.

A thousand more British Marines arrived today on the troopship Minnesota. The general labor union called a one-hour strike as a protest against the landing of the forces but the walkout failed to materialize.

Thaw Will Aid Mrs. Barnum

Beacon, N. Y., Feb 28 (AP).—Aid from Harry K. Thaw, whose escape from Matteawan in 1915 resulted in the discharge of her husband, an asylum employe, today was promised Mrs. Ellen Barnum, under parole for stabbing her son during a fit of anger.

Joseph Barnum, 13, one of five small children, was improving at Highland Hospital today from a bread knife wound in the back Thursday.

"You can't do anything to my mother for this," the boy declared. "I egged her on. She only meant to hit me with the handle of the knife because I was plaguing the kids to death. I got to get back quick and help her raise them."

Mrs. Barnum was paroled on a charge of assault. If the boy recovers she will not be prosecuted, District Attorney Reynolds said. The mother was thankful when she was told the boy probably would recover.

Thaw last night promised to send Mrs. Barnum a $500 check.

"I was always sorry for what happened to her husband," he said. "He had nothing to do with my escape and was never tried."

Senator Gould's Rights Upheld

Washington, Feb. 28 (AP).—The right of Senator Gould, Republican, Maine, to a place in the Senate, was upheld today in the report of the senate elections sub-committee that investigated charges against him.

The sub-committee members recommended that the charges, which revolved about the payment of $100,000 to a Canadian official, be dropped.

POLICE PRESENT BECAUSE OF ADMIRERS, NOT ENEMIES.

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—Presence of police in and about the Century Theatre last night where Beniamino Gigli, Metropolitan tenor, was giving a concert, caused rumors that the singer's life had been threatened, but it was said today that the guard had been assigned to protect him from his admirers.

A year ago Gigli fled from Detroit before a schedule concert when he received a note that if he sang he would "adorn a slab in the morgue". Previously he was said to have received threatening letters both in this country and abroad demanding money. At a concert at the Century Theatre last February detectives were assigned to guard him.

SMOKE FROM HEATER BRINGS FIREMEN TO WALL STREET

A still alarm about 9 o'clock this morning called firemen to the Claremont, corner Wall and John streets. The firemen ascertained that smoke which was seen by someone who sent in the alarm came from a heater in which a wood fire had been kindled.

Doheny Must Give Up Naval Oil Contracts

Supreme Court Holds Agreements Were Tainted and Fall Leasing Policy Was Illegal—Will Not Receive Back Money Spent in Attempting to Carry Out Agreements.

Washington, Feb. 28 (AP).—Edward L. Doheny must give up the naval oil leases and contracts awarded him when Albert B. Fall was secretary of the interior.

Nor will he receive back the money he spent in attempting to carry the agreements into effect.

In an opinion amounting to a complete victory for the government, the supreme court held today that the agreements not only were tainted by fraud, but that the Fall leasing policy under which they were made was illegal.

It was under this same policy that the Teapot Dome lease was given to Harry F. Sinclair, although the suit to cancel that lease was not directly involved in today's finding.

Entitled to no Compensation.

The opinion of the court was announced by Justice Butler, and there was no dissent. It completely affirmed the findings of the court of appeals, holding that the Doheny leases and contracts are invalid and that Doheny is entitled to no compensation.

The highest tribunal based its decision on evidence deduced in the trial court and previously brought to light in the Senate oil inquiry, showing how the negotiations were conducted without competitive bidding and in secrecy, and how before the deal was consummated Doheny sent Fall $100,000 in a little black bag.

Jury Verdict Not Considered.

The final finding was taken without regard for the verdict of a jury in a local court which acquitted Fall and Doheny of a criminal conspiracy charge based in the $100,000 transaction.

The court found that the interest and influence of Fall, as well as his official action, were corruptly secured by Doheny for the making of the contracts and leases.

Fall, the court said, had stated that in conducting the leasing negotiations he would act himself, and that the Doheny company acted upon belief that Fall controlled the situation. The opinion reviewed in detail the secret negotiations, and state that the facts leading up to the leases showed that the Doheny company had preferential treatment. It was well established, the court found, that the contracts and leases were made without competition.

Furthermore, the opinion continued, the leasing act of 1920, under which the leases and contracts were made, did not authorize the wholesale removal of the oil from the ground, but was intended only to aid in the conservation of the oil in the ground as a reserve, and granted the secretary of the navy full discretion in the sale, exchange or storage of it

Bribe Not Necessary.

Among other things, the court declared it was not necessary to decide whether the payment of $100,000 by Doheny to Fall was a bribe, constituting a conspiracy to defraud the government.

Since the leasing act of 1920 did not authorize the awarding of leases, said the opinion, the Elk Hills lease was invalid whether or not a bribe was passed.

Nevertheless, the court declared in passing that Fall's domination in the naval reserves were brought about by "calculation," and constituted a conspiracy between Fall and Doheny.

More U. S. Troops Land at Corinto

Total of American Forces in Nicaragua Expected To Reach 3,000 Men—Great Britain Will Recognize Diaz, If Necessary.

Managua, Feb. 28 (AP).—Further small detachments of United States sailors have been landed at Corinto from the destroyer tenders Altair and Melville. The total of American forces on the west coast of Nicaragua now is about 1,800. With the arrival of the transport Henderson, scheduled to reach Corinto in a week, the total probably will be swelled to three thousand men. For maintaining communications and for use in observations, the Americans have six De Haviland planes and four two-seater scouting planes.

In addition to the American warships the British cruiser Colombo is now anchored off Corinto, ready to take aboard British nationals if their lives are placed in jeopardy by the fighting between the Liberal and Conservative factions.

With the object of guarding the railway line from Managua to Granada and to discourage the Liberals from making an attack on Granada, 350 marines were ordered to Granada yesterday. It is expected that naval forces will soon be ordered to the Matagalpa region, as it is in line with the advance of the Liberal general Monacada.

Week-end developments in the Nicaraguan situation were:

Harold Patteson, British charge d'affaires at Corinto, declared that his country, if necessary, would recognize the regime of the Conservative president of Nicaragua, Adolfo Diaz. He said that Captain Leckie of the British cruiser Colombo would do nothing without first conferring with Admiral Latimer, commanding the American naval forces.

Several cars never before shown here will be exhibited for the first time in Kingston at the show.

The work of marking off the spaces was completed this morning and this afternoon many of the dealers were placing their exhibits and by night many of the cars will be in place. The exhibits at the farther ends of the big drill shed are first placed in position and the exhibits are gradually completed back toward the entrance doors. The cars which are not placed this afternoon will be placed according to schedule Tuesday morning so that when the doors open Tuesday afternoon every exhibit will be in position.

Britain Accepts Naval Limitation

Reply Regarded as Opening the Way for a Three-Power Consideration of Limitation of Smaller Classes of War Craft in Line With Principles at Washington.

Washington, Feb. 28 (AP).—Great Britain's response to the American overture for further naval limitation, received at the state department today, accepted President Coolidge's invitation to discuss the subject and said that the British delegates would "do their best to further the success of the proposed conversation."

Together with the Japanese acceptance, the reply was regarded as probably opening the way for a three-power consideration of limitation of smaller classes of war craft in line with the principles applied to first line ships at the Washington conference.

It was thought that some such project was under study here, although the British and Japanese acceptances, together with the French and Italian refusals, will be carefully examined before any decision is announced.

Auto Is Faster Than Fleet Prairie Coyote

Aberdeen, Wash.—No ordinary coyote can outrun an automobile, claims A. C. Gaillac, who exhibited here as proof the spoils of a recent highway chase. He was returning from Olympia when the coyote leaped out into the road and ran ahead of the car. Gaillac speeded up and soon overtook the animal, which disdained to turn out. The car knocked the coyote senseless and Gaillac finished its career with a wrench. He brought in the pelt for the bounty.

Drug Addict Must Go to Church to Stay Free

New York.—Federal Judge Winslow looked meditatively at the youthful prisoner before him. He was John Spinelle, eighteen years old, and had pleaded guilty to possessing heroin.

"I will sentence you to six months in the penitentiary," said the judge, "but I will suspend sentence on one condition," Judge Winslow added.

"You must attend church at least once a week during the period of suspension.

"I shall ask your rector to keep me posted about your attendance. Your fate is in your own hands. If you fail once you go to jail for six months."

"I do not want anyone to think," said Judge Winslow afterward, "that I consider going to church a punishment in any way. I just wanted the boy to be under good influence during the period of his suspension."

Girl Playfully Points Gun; Slays Her Mother

Kenosha, Wis.—Edna Wade, seventeen years old, is under the care of a physician in her home here, prostrated with grief over having accidentally shot and killed her mother when she playfully pointed a revolver at her and pulled the trigger. She did not know it was loaded, she said.

The tragedy occurred while Mrs. Wade was preparing a party in observance of her forty-fourth birthday anniversary. The girl's father had just purchased the revolver and loaded it for the first time. No official investigation will be held because of the girl's condition, according to Coroner Joseph Friend. He gave "accidental death" as the cause.

Three Fingers Amputated; Skin Grafted on Hand

Little Rock, Ark.—Skin removed from three amputated fingers of the right hand of Mrs. G. N. Malone, nineteen, was used to cover the back of the same hand in an unusual operation performed by surgeons of the Baptist State hospital.

The fingers were crushed in an automobile accident, making amputation necessary, but the skin was not broken. Surgeons said that it is possible the skin was "killed" and will not grow upon the injured hand, in which event other skin will be grafted. However, they believe the grafting is final.

Mrs. Malone suffered the injuries to her fingers and hand when the truck in which she and her husband, with a driver, were en route to Hot Springs struck another car a glancing blow, shot off the highway and rolled over twice into a ditch. Both Malone and his wife were pinned under the truck.

It matters little whether the Amazons ever lived. The persistence of the tradition regarding them needed no original basis of fact in the distant past to justify it. Amazons were a necessary conception through the centuries when sturdy, independent women were exceptional, but very real nevertheless. One doubts, however, whether young folk nowadays know what an Amazon is. There are too many of them to attract attention.

LAST NIGHT on the RADIO

Sunday night reception was good in spots. The Atwater Kent program could be heard equally well from WGY or WSAI. Early reception was marred by bloopers. WCAU was received early with most amazing strength and late in the evening WJAX was equally satisfactory. Morning reception from WDBZ was very unsatisfactory, there being a continuous hum that was almost a howl.

Saturday evening WDBZ covered itself with glory by the way it broadcasted the Elting dinner speeches from The Stuyvesant. Although the remote control wire had just been installed, it worked perfectly and reception was clear and strong. Hundreds of persons who could not attend the dinner heard and enjoyed the speeches.

Reception of Texas stations late Saturday night was extremely good.

WKBO, Jersey City, was heard in its new wave length of 472 meters, where it interferes with several other stations that already interfered with one another. This is going to be a new signal point.

Don't put off saying nice things about people until they are dead; most live ones like to hear nice things about themselves.

Mr. Asker: What do you think of President Coolidge's speech?

Gladys: I didn't know he had regained it.

I'm not ashamed to tell this tale
It isn't fair a bit,
He used a bum cent in a scale,
And got a weigh with it.

Children have usually forgotten the radio bedtime stories by the time they go to bed.

Producer (interrupting singer at voice trial): "Does that end the first verse, Miss?"

Singer: "Well, I've got to where it says 'Refrain'."

Producer: "Good! Please do as it says!"

There isn't much to life but this:
A baby's smile, a woman's kiss.
A book, a pipe, a fire, a friend
And just a little cash to spend.

The decision of a United States judge that sea captains have no power to perform marriages is regarded as reducing the perils of ocean travel.

"My poor fellow," said the woman, "here is a quarter for you. It must be dreadful to be lame, but just think how much worse it would be if you were blind!"

"Yer right, lady," agreed the beggar, "when I was blind I was always getting counterfeit money."

The young wife sat plying her needle. "It's too bad," she said to her husband, "the careless way the tailor sewed this button on. This is the fifth time I've had to put it on for you."

Mark Twain was called upon to speak at a club, and took for his subject "Honesty." He said that when he was a boy at home he one day saw a cart of melons. He was a boy and tempted; besides, he liked melons. "I sneaked up to the cart," said Mark, "and stole a melon. I went into the alley to devour it. But—I did not sooner set my teeth into it than I paused; a strange feeling came over me. I came to a quick conclusion. Firmly, I walked up to that cart, replaced the melon and—took a ripe one!"

Climatic Change Coming

Scientists have been taking the temperature of ocean water along the Atlantic coast and have come to the conclusion that every year sees the ocean growing colder and colder. In their opinion the day will not be a thousand years distant when Iceland will be a winter resort and France will be deserted except during a few months of summer.

THAT GASOLINE TAX.

The propagandists who misrepresent honest and intelligent owners of automobiles by using the automobile [illegible] a campaign to oppose the [illegible] taxation of motor vehicles are growing more shifty. In their latest manifesto they say.

Out of 35 states that have had the gas tax four years or more, all but three have increased the amount of original tax decided upon. We are talking about a 2c gas tax for New York, but we must realize that a 2c tax this year means possibly a 3c, 4c or 5c tax two or three years from now. Only twenty-three states out of forty-five have as low a gas tax as 2c, and the tax in the rest of the states ranges from 2½c to 5c.

Also, we must keep in mind that the gas tax places the heaviest burden on the poor and needy. We estimate a 2c tax will cost the average Ford owner from $5 to $10 a year, and that it will cost the average driver of a car costing six or eight times as much only about $10 to $20 a year. There can be no equity in this kind of a tax.

These same professional agitators pretending to "serve the automobile owner" in order that they may justify their hat-passing, salary-drawing activities, declared not long ago in favor of a gasoline tax provided the license fee was reduced to $3, flat. Where was their consideration for "the poor and needy," then, when they were advocating the same license fee for the $300 car as for the $5,000 car?

It is for the purpose of equalizing the tax according to cost of the car, as well as according to use of highways, that it is now proposed to retain the graduated license tax.

The fact that 22 states have a gasoline tax higher than two cents is an added reason why New York state should not delay in imposing such a tax.

Whatever form of increased taxation of motor vehicles is proposed, the professional agitator will oppose it. They think they can further their own interests by so doing, because they believe, mistakenly, that other automobile owners are, like themselves, seeking to shirk a just share of taxation.

How much longer will legislators permit gross injustice to continue because they are scared by a few yawping professional organizers who represent at most less than five per cent of the owners of motor vehicles?

THE BETTER MOVIES.

The shrug of the "intellectuals" at the mention of the movies and their dismissal of the "new art" as clumsy, crass and unworthy of attention, may be as pronounced as ever, but it is noticeable that writers are plucking up courage enough to speak in praise of the better film productions. For example, the Philadelphia Evening Ledger has just gone even so far as this:

> The movies are living down many of their earlier faults. The stage is in a way to acquire some new ones as it grows older. It is in the newer films and not on the conventional stage that emphasis is placed on the true poetic quality of drama. The better producers of movies have been gathering knowledge at sources never discovered by producers for the stage. They have been learning from the great etchers. They have gone back frankly to the painters and even to the old masters for technique of a sort which may fill the action of a play with unprecedented force or infinite tenderness. Movie producers have managed to copy the lights of Rembrandt and the color nuances of Manet. It is not uncommon now to find movies so austerely conceived and so stately in composition that they could stand by their pictorial qualities alone.

This may be saying too much, but undoubtedly the time has come when not alone the average man but the man claiming "culture" may confess without shame, even in the presence of an "intellectual," that he has found one of the better movies a good and worth-while entertainment.

The average conservative thinks of a policewoman as sadly out of place, that there are more kinds of police work than the arrest of fighting hoodlums, still according to a writer in The Weekly Health the particular value of [illegible] in police work lies in their tact, gentleness and diplomacy in dealing with women, children and the [illegible]. It is also said that the policewoman is a good influence on the [illegible] because the [illegible] arouses a sense of shame rather than fear. Men in general might be similarly affected the first time, but would they be after the novelty had worn off?

The day is coming when American industries will be owned by the American worker, according to Forbes Magazine. This prediction is based on the great increase in employe ownership of stock. Twenty large industrial, railway and utility corporations some little time ago reported a total of 315,000 employe-stockowners. Their holdings had an aggregate value of $454,000,000. Mr. Forbes believes that this tendency is one to be encouraged rather than discouraged.

The will of a wealthy business man of New York leaves $10,000 outright and $2,500 annually for 15 years to the woman who has served him as secretary during a long period—on condition that she employ the money for her own benefit alone. The testator meant well, but if the legatee has been partly supporting her family, as is likely, she is now in a very trying position.

SHOWING UP THE GALL BLADDER.

It is now possible for your doctor to tell you, nine times out of ten, whether or not it is your liver and gall bladder that is giving trouble, without having to make you undergo an operation.

A simple dye is taken by the mouth, or injected into the veins, and the manner in which the liver and gall bladder handle the dye tells the story for your doctor.

If they are working properly, the liver will pass the dye out of itself into the tubes leading to intestine and gall bladder, these tubes must be open or not obstructed, the gall bladder must have the power of filling and emptying itself, when filled the gall bladder should have sufficient dye in it to produce a shadow.

If the gall bladder is normal, it will begin to show a shadow in about four hours, will change its size, will cast its heaviest shadow in 16 to 24 hours, and empty in 48 hours.

All this is seen of course by taking X-ray pictures at the above periods.

Now if the gall bladder doesn't fill with dye, and there is no shadow or only a slight one, or if the dye is longer than 5 hours in appearing, and takes longer than 48 hours to empty, then it is not normal.

What is likely to be interfering with the proper working of the gall bladder?

In most cases it is due to gall stones which not only prevent the dye from being seen, but prevent the gall bladder from filling and emptying itself properly.

Any inflammatory condition, or any growth, could likewise interfere with the action of the gall bladder.

Now of course there are symptoms of which the patient complains, and there are other methods of learning of the presence of growths and stones, but this simple dye method is now one of the most valuable aids to your doctor and may save you from an unnecessary operation. On the other hand if there is trouble there, and the knife becomes necessary, you will have an excellent chance for good results and ultimate recovery before you become weak and in poor condition to withstand the operation.

WHAT THE GRACIOUS HOSTESS SAYS!

By DELLA THOMPSON LUDES

THE HOME TABLE

THE home table should always present, not only a neat, but an attractive appearance. This is not so difficult as it sounds, even for the woman who does all her own work. There should be, to be correct, a long white cloth on the dinner table every night, but many of us who want to live according to all the tenets of polite society, cannot afford to do so. If we have to consider laundry bills, as most of us do, we can use place mats as we do for lunch. We should, however, have dinner, with the cloth, the silver, and the dishes that go with dinner, often enough to accustom ourselves and our families to the proper usage.

There should be a decoration of some kind on the table every day and at every meal, and here we will allow no excuse, no swerving from the rule. This decoration on the table stands for something in our lives. The centerpiece itself may be simple or elegant—the meaning is the same. If it is of flowers, two things should be remembered: the flowers should look as natural as possible in whatever vessel they are placed, and they should not be so high as to obstruct the view. Flowers massed into a bouquet so that no individual flower has a chance to show its loveliness, lose half their effect.

A floral centerpiece need not be an expensive one. The country woman, or the woman of the small town who can get to fields and roadsides, is especially fortunate.

For the woman who has to buy her flowers there are other things to do. A round mirror, not too small, surrounded with artificial moss, and one little sail boat riding on the surface of the "lake" is a pleasing thought for a summer day. The same mirror banked with cotton batting "snow" sprinkled with diamond dust and a skating doll on the "pond" is another idea. A small pretty basket of apples, or some ornament, may be used. The table centerpiece does not have to be of flowers, although we oftenest think of it in that way. At any rate, let us every day have some decorative feature on the table that pleases the eyes and stirs the heart.

If we are at some pains to dress our table attractively we shall be less likely to come to the meal ourselves carelessly clad or slovenly groomed.

Testimony Taken In Shandaken Suit

Town of Shandaken Ready to Pay, But Suit Involves Question of Who Should Receive Money.

Additional testimony was taken Saturday before Judge G. D. B. Hasbrouck in the action of H. W. Misner against the town of Shandaken, an action to recover for the construction of a bridge in the town which Mr. Misner contends he built under assignment of a contract which had been awarded to Matthew G. Thompson. The town of Shandaken is willing to pay for the work which has been completed but does not know where to pay the money. Some time ago John W. Eckert, who appears for the town, asked that the money be paid into court and the town be allowed to withdraw.

The difference in the case arises out of the claim by Mrs. Thompson, who contends that the money should be paid to the estate of Mr. Thompson, who has since died. There appears to be no written assignment of the contract. Testimony on the part of both the plaintiff and defendant has been taken. A relative of Mr. Thompson, a beneficiary under the will, testified that the contract had been assigned to Mr. Misner.

Herbert B. Gruber appeared for the attorney general's office on behalf of the State Industrial Commission. Mr. Gruber is a son of Colonel Abram Gruber, who was one of the leading politicians of the Platt regime twenty-five years ago and came frequently here to make political speeches and who was a great favorite with Kingston people. Col. Gruber was the author of the celebrated poem, "My Neighbor's Roses."

The son is not a deputy attorney general located in New York city.

Roscoe V. Ellsworth, of Brinnier, Canfield & Ellsworth, appeared for plaintiff and Henry R. DeWitt appeared for the estate.

The Fate of the Natchez

THE attraction of a small bit of real estate for the commandant of a French fort in Mississippi caused one of the bloodiest massacres that ever occurred in North America and subsequently resulted in the complete extinction of the Natchez, a tribe of Indians whose standard of civilization was highest among the native tribes of the continent.

The town of New Orleans was founded by the Fench in 1718 and efforts were begun to colonize a wide territory. An officer named Chopart was placed in charge of the territory of the Natchez tribe and a small fort was erected. Chopart was cruel and tyrannical. He failed to see anything to admire in the tribal life of the Natchez, though their social and religious customs were of a very high type and their pride quite lofty.

On the banks of a little rivulet these Indians, who were sun-worshippers, had built their central town, where dwelt their chief, "the Sun of the Apple." Chopart decided that the site of this town was the spot where he would erect a village for French colonists. The Natchez remonstrated but Chopart refused to hear their protests. Out of the thousands of square miles available, he would have no other site for his village. The Indians tried bribery and Chopart accepted; however, the proud Natchez were only seeking delay.

The great chief planned a massacre. One day in 1829 the Indians began straggling into the French camp. Some braves carried grain as the first installment of Chopart's bribe. When the tribesmen had assembled within the fort a gun was fired as a signal for the killing to begin.

The surprised soldiers made little resistance. The commandant, whose stubborn claim to the town site had raised the trouble was cut down in his garden by one of the common Indians, all those of higher rank having refused to touch him. Nearly 700 were slain. The French at New Orleans vowed vengeance. A small army pursued the Natchez for hundreds of miles through the wilderness. Those who were not killed at once were sold into slavery in the West Indies, the women being separated from the men in order that the tribe might be totally extinguished.

THE TWO PENCILS

"I," said the little pencil, "have had a busy life. I have written so much that I feel as though I really were quite important."

In a Note Book.

"I," said the bigger pencil, "have had bad luck, and somehow I have the feeling that I will never write so very much. You see I have broken off twice and had to be sharpened again.

"My owner makes such a terribly sharp point that I can't help breaking.

"And then she bears down heavily with me, and that—together with a sharp point—just won't do.

"So it does look as though I would not get far with writing. I'm much bigger than you, little pencil, but even when I get small I fear I will not have much to my credit.

"You have really written a great deal, haven't you?"

"Oh, yes," said the little pencil, "I have had no bad luck, and I have led a very busy life.

"I have written many compositions. I have done any number of sums in arithmetic.

"I could tell you I know a great deal about arithmetic and I do sums well.

"My owner says I do them well. She says she always seems to think better when she has me.

"Now of course I really think she is flattering me, but still she does feel that way about it.

"I really don't know much about arithmetic though I can do sums nicely.

"But once I've answered the sums and they are down on the paper I couldn't tell you what they were at all.

"It is the same way about compositions. I've written many, but once they are written, they are written.

"I don't bother further in thinking about them.

"I do geography in the same way, and I haven't any different method for history.

"The dates when kings and queens and presidents and all famous people lived—I've written them down in a note book and my owner has handed in the note book and those dates were all correct.

"But really you must not give me too much credit for knowing a great deal.

"I could have some owners and not know a single thing, nor be able to write a correct answer.

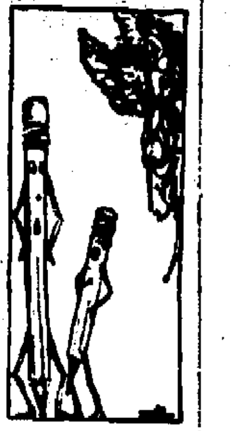
"I really don't take all the credit to myself."

The Fairy Queen had been listening and she was much amused at the talk between the two pencils.

"Well," said the little pencil, "I won't be working much more after a bit, but still I have some more to do, for my owner says she is going to carry me in her coat pocket after this so that when she wants to write anything down she will always have a pencil ready.

"I'm just that size now.

"So I'll still be useful.



She Was Much Amused.

"I'll do whatever she wishes, and it is nice to think that I really did a good pencil's work and wrote the correct answers to sums and questions in history and geography and that my compositions were always well marked."

"You've certainly had a good education," said the bigger pencil, "and I fear I never will have it."

And the Fairy Queen went back to Fairyland and told the Fairies and the Brownies and the Gnomes and the Elves about the conversation between the two pencils.

The moderation of fortunate people comes from the calm which good fortune gives to their tempers.

So near is falsehood to truth that a wise man would do well not to trust himself on the narrow edge.—Cicero.

He who would reach the desired goal must, while a boy, suffer and labor much, and bear both heat and cold.—Horace.

CHATTER

Many an otherwise good man makes a poor husband.

A cynic is a man who laughs at the world with tears in his eyes.

A young man doesn't begin to rise in the world until he settles down.

Many an indulgent husband allows the indulgence to stop with himself.

One can't estimate the amount of moral courage a man has by his physical dimensions.

One of World's Wonders

The hanging gardens of Babylon consisted of trees and flowers apparently planted upon the roof of some building. The structure was one square terrace built upon another to about 150 feet in height and resting upon hollow pillars of burnt brick which were filled with earth. For irrigation, water had to be pumped up from the Euphrates river.

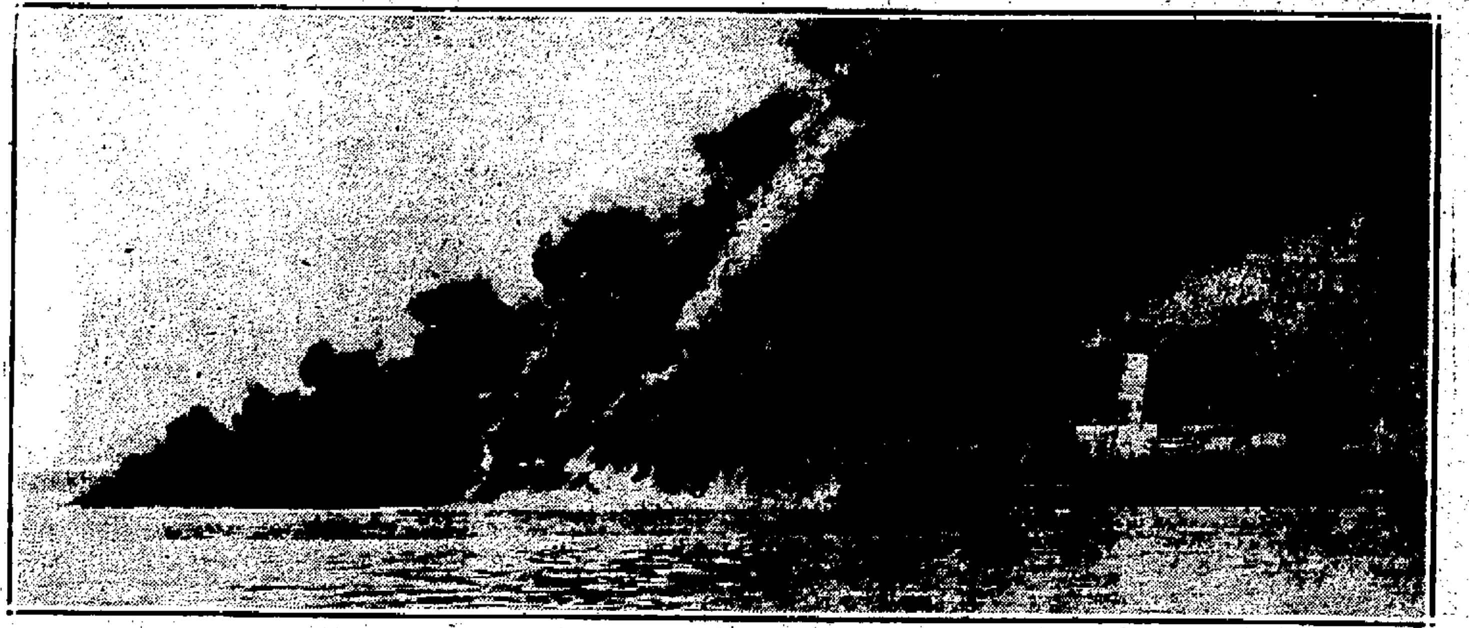
Exploding Tanker Lays Barrage of Blazing Naphtha



Blazing naphtha was scattered over Kill van Kull at Bayonne, N. J., by an explosion on the oil tanker Black Sea. Almost overcome by heat, eight members of the crew were rescued. Another ship ran aground in getting away from the flames.

Worth-While Writing Never an Easy Task

Writing is a long labor, in one mode or in another; some authors work physically, writing and rewriting, polishing and repolishing, casting and recasting; others sit down, doing nothing for months at a time save call themselves lazy devils, slack-backed good-for-nothings, self-indulgent blighters and similar pretty names, until the stuff that has been fermenting below the surface all the time bursts forth and seems to write itself.

It doesn't matter which mode is used, they are equally hard; nothing is born without pain. And there is more pain in this business of writing than meets the eye, especially the eye of the poor folk who think authorship is an affair of an adventure, pen, ink and a correspondence course. For, while a story may take a month, a year, ten years to write, and block all other activity while it is being written, the author's stomach demands its tribute at the usual times.

He must finance himself, for his stock in trade cannot be inventoried by a banker; obviously, while so doing, he must manufacture his product, for if he fails no one else can do it: and at least he must go forth and be his own salesman.—Adventure Magazine.

Bronze Finish on Brass

The bureau of standards says one of the simplest ways of producing a bronze effect upon brass is to treat it with a weak solution of sodium or potassium sulphide. The darkness of the coating will depend upon the strength of the solution and the length of time it is applied. If desired, it can be brushed off in spots, yielding a bronze finish.

Don't treat a cough lightly. Don't be foolish and say, "I'll get over it."

No matter what causes it: exposure, colds or irritation from dust and smoking—a cough is a signal that the throat tissues are inflamed and may quickly become breeding places for myriads of germs that lurk in the mucus. If this infection spreads, serious consequences will result.

Get rid of that cough right now before it "settles" in the "danger zone". Take PERTUSSIN at once.

It loosens up congestion promptly, and by stimulating expectoration, helps to rid you of sticky, germ-laden phlegm that clogs the air passages.

PERTUSSIN is a simple herbal remedy—pleasant to take, free from "dope", and has been prescribed by physicians for 30 years.

If your cough has already settled in the "danger zone", you should see your Doctor.

BUILDING TEAM AROUND COLLINS

Connie Mack Pins Hope for Pennant in Star.

A new infield built around Eddie Collins, his star second baseman of championship days, carries the pennant hopes of sixty-four-year-old Connie Mack in his twenty-fourth season as manager of the Philadelphia Athletics.

Returning to the same post he occupied in Mack's famous $100,000 infield combination 16 years ago, Collins, deposed leader of the White Sox, will have new Philadelphia co-workers on both right and left, Connie has indicated. Replacing Galloway at short stop will be Joe Boley, acquired from the Baltimore Internationals, while at first base will be Dudley Branom, hard-hitting star from the Kansas City club of the American association. Jimmy Dykes again is slated for third base.

With this combination as a starter, Mack will have probably the best-equipped reserve infield in organized baseball, with Poole for first base, Bishop, second; Galloway, short, and Hale, third.

The changes have been made primarily to bolster one of the weakest-hitting clubs of the 1926 American league campaign. In Collins and Branom he has obtained two players who hit well over .300 last year. Boley also climbed into the select group of the International.

One more heavy artilleryman for the lineup was obtained in the signing of the veteran Zach Wheat, former Brooklyn outfielder, who for years finished among the National league batting leaders. Zach appears slated to patrol left field, with Al Simmons in center and Walter French in right. West and Wilson from Waco, Texas, and Metzler of Wichita Falls will seek to displace the veterans, while Mack also may find room for Bill Lamar.

The pitching staff holding over from last year includes Howard Ehmke, Sam Gray, Ed Rommel and Jack Quinn, right-handers, and Grove, Willis, Walberg and Pate, southpaws. [illegible] and Hunter from Dallas, Texas, Shores from Wichita Falls and Terbea, a Philadelphia product, also are possibilities.

"We've done everything possible to strengthen the team," Mack said. "I figure it will be a tough race, but I have a hunch we will be landing the pennant next October. If not, I'm still ready to try again the following year."

Ruppert Won't Discuss "Prices"

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—Colonel Jacob Ruppert, owner of New York Yankees, is not taking seriously his club's salary differences with Babe Ruth, master of all distance sluggers.

"Just say for me that I have nothing but the kindest feeling for Babe," he said today in discussing for the first time the situation that has arisen over Ruth's demand for a $100,000 a year contract. "I will make no forecast on the salary issue. That must be adjusted in a private conference with Ruth. The public is not interested in Babe's pay check.

"While reporters attempted to convince the Colonel of the contrary, he refused steadfastly to discuss "prices". He did admit that there might be "some change" in Babe's playing agreement for the coming season. As to the size of the change, Ruppert said: "I'll wait and see how Ruth feels when he reaches here. You can't do much in these cross country conferences."

The Yankee owner, who expects the home run king to visit him "about the middle of the week," insisted he had received no letter from Ruth demanding the record salary in addition to a two-year contract and refund of $7,700 extracted from past checks in the form of fines. He said he had not heard from Ruth since last fall. The latter is now on the way east from California where he has finished his part in a motion picture.

Argentina Pays Homage to Fliers

All Parts of Country Gather at Religious Services For Bodies of Captain Woolsey and Lieutenant Benton Are Taken Back to United States.

Buenos Aires, Feb. 28 (AP).—Argentina had made extensive preparations to fete the United States army good will fliers when they arrived here, but now a sorrowing nation is paying homage in a different way to two of the aviators who were killed in Saturday's crash between the planes New York and Detroit.

The bodies of Captain Clinton F. Woolsey of Michigan and Lieutenant John E. Benton of California, were taken to the military club Saturday night, a few hours after the accident, to lie in state.

Before the bodies are taken aboard the steamer Vauban this afternoon for the journey to the United States, all parts of the country will be represented at religious services at the Episcopal Cathedral. Throughout the services and the transfer of the bodies the cavalry, artillery and aviation sections of the Buenos Aires garrison will render military honors. President De Alvear, who on Friday had greeted the members of the good will squadron at Ma rDel Plata, the summer Capital, returned to Buenos Aires last night to attend the religious service.

Major Herbert A. Dargue, in command of the squadron, and Lieutenant Ennis Whitehead, reserve pilot of the New York, had a narrow escape from death. Lieutenant Whitehead injured his left ankle when he touched the ground with his parachute and walks with difficulty.

BILLIE AT THE ZOO

BILLIE BROWNIE was on his way to visit the Llama in the zoo when he was stopped by having a talk with the Gray Squirrel who had been busy eating peanuts for some time and who was ready to take a short rest and chat.

"Yes," the Gray Squirrel told Billie Brownie, "it is quite true what you have heard. Our family and the Red Squirrel family have always been quarrelsome and have not been on any too friendly terms. Of course we say it is the fault of the Red Squirrel and I suppose they say the same of us.

"But I'm quite sure that the fair opinion is that it is the fault of the Red Squirrels that we do not get along together. Yes, I'm sure of that.

"First of All, I Come From South America."

"They're so quick-tempered and they can fight so hard. We're not as they are at all, no, indeed."

"I believe you," said Billie Brownie. "Another time I want to have more of a talk with you, but today I have an engagement with a llama and I don't think one should keep a llama waiting. I have a feeling one shouldn't do that."

"Well, stop for a chat again, Billie Brownie," said Gray Squirrel, as he gave his tail a fine flourish in saying good-by to Billie Brownie.

"Well, am I on time?" asked Billie Brownie as he came to where the llama was.

"I'm sure I don't know," said the Llama. "I haven't any wrist watch and I haven't any clock, and if I had I couldn't tell the time. Of course I know when it is meal time. But I don't need a clock to tell me that. My tummy tells me when it is meal time.

"I know when it is bedtime, for my sleepy eyes tell me that. And, of course, when it is bright it is the time to be up, and when it is dark, it is the time to be asleep. That is the general rule and, of course, if one takes a nap in between—well it is simply napping time and one doesn't need a clock for that."

"I only hoped I hadn't kept you waiting," said Billie Brownie. "I am thankful that I haven't."

"No," said the Llama, "I haven't been kept waiting. Of course I am here and ready to see you."

"I am glad to hear that," chuckled Billie Brownie. "And you promised me to tell me something of yourself, if you remember, and if it is not too much bother."

"I remember and it is not too much bother," said the Llama.

"First of all, I come from South America, and I am a little bit like a camel except that I am much smaller and I haven't any hump, nor have I humps!

"I have a relative known as the Guanaco.

"Then I have an Alpaca cousin. His family name has become famous for there is a cloth known as alpaca cloth, and that has come from the fleece of his family.

"The Alpaca family aren't so strong as we are away from their home mountains and they object to other climates which don't bother us at all.

"Of course you know we have always been useful in carrying bundles and packages and have been regular 'beasts of burden,' as the saying is.

"We have lovely long wavy hair as you can see, but there is an Alpaca cousin here, a white one, with blue eyes. That's quite an interesting thing for, somehow, when thinking of blue eyes people would think of a little girl and not of an Alpaca.

"But you said you had another engagement to keep. I don't want to delay you."

"Yes," said Billie Brownie, "I promised I'd run in for afternoon bread with the Bears. That is, I didn't exactly say I'd run in—but I said that I would look on as the bears are to have their afternoon bread shortly.

"The keeper told me they had it just as people will have afternoon tea—the same idea you know!

"So I must be off, Llama. Thanks immensely for your story."

"You're very welcome, Billie Brownie. Very welcome indeed!"

RACE BETTERMENT

ALBERT EDWARD WIGGAM in his recent book, "The Fruit of the Family Tree," says that our lives are largely the results of heredity and not environment. In the same family one child is physically weak, the other strong and robust. Efforts of the one child meet with success, while that of the other end in failure. Two children subject to the same environment develop morally in marked contrast. The one is controlled by high moral ideals, the life of the other is dominated by selfishness and immorality. How is the difference to be accounted for? Mr. Wiggam would have us believe that heredity and not environment explains the difference. Undoubtedly Mr. Wiggam has made a valuable contribution to science in the argument presented in his book. Even though he may prove his point scientifically, it does not eliminate the moral obligation in which everybody shares in life for the reason that heredity will always have to make allowances for the environment in which the contribution of heredity is to live and develop.

Environment assists in correcting many of the errors which heredity passes on and overcomes many of its evil tendencies. Environment may not create the conditions under which a person begins life but it has much to do with the influence under which that life is to be developed. Heredity excuses no one from the obligation he owes family, friends and the community in which he lives. "If a farmer plants potatoes in rich soil and then does not save the big ones for seed, but continues to plant all the offspring, will the rich soil improve the stock?" inquires Mr. Wiggam. Certainly not. But, if the offspring happens to be all the farmer has to plant, the manner in which the soil is cared for will have an important effect upon the result of the potato crop. The conscientious discharge of moral obligation bears a vital relation in determining environment to which heredity makes its contribution. Heredity alone argues for fatalism. Environment makes possible the exercise of free will and the liberty of choice in determining life's values; so that one can make much out of his life even though he had a poor start and has had to meet serious obstacles which heredity placed in his way.

WHEN I WAS TWENTY-ONE

BY JOSEPH KAYE

At 21: Cecilia Beaux Became a Paris Salon Artist by Accident.

"AT ABOUT this time I attempted something more ambitious than the portraits from photographs that I had been doing—a large picture of my sister and her little son. He was getting to the age when a boy outgrows sitting on his mother's lap. It is becoming a bit uncomfortable both for his body and his pride. In their hearts, both mother and son realized this. They knew that in a way it marks the end of one epoch in their mutual lives. This was what I wanted to express in the picture, which I called 'Les Derniers Jours d'Enfance'—the last day of childhood.

"I had my own studio then—such as it was—bare, ugly walls and practically no furniture except an old steamer chair. I knew the kind of dress I wanted the mother to wear but she did not happen to have it so we resorted to various makeshifts; she wore a black jersey, to which we attached one black satin sleeve—the one for the arm that would show in the picture, and so on.

"After the picture was painted a girl friend of mine, who had gone abroad to study, happened to come home for a visit. She saw the picture in my studio and insisted on bringing it back with her to Paris. There she sent it to the Salon—and it was accepted—Cecilia Beaux."

TODAY: Cecilia Beaux is the greatest American woman artist. She was chosen also in a recent canvass by the National League of Women Voters, as one of the twelve greatest living American women. Cecilia Beaux is practically self-taught, having had no more than two years' art tuition at most.

Financial and Commercial

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—Speculators for the advance continued in control of the price movement in today's stock market, basing their campaign on large current earnings and prospects of higher dividends. Banks called about $20,000,000 in loans with the result that the renewal rate on call money was marked up to 4½ per cent, but this failed to check operations of pools, which acted on the theory that the firm money rates were only temporary.

High priced industrials again came to the fore. Houston Oil was the sensational individual feature soaring over 15 points to a new record high at 118⅞. Commercial Solvent B, jumped 10 points, Baldwin moved up over five points to 201 and General Motors touched 167, the highest quotation since the declaration of the 50 per cent stock dividend. Among the score or so new industrials highs were du Pont, Bush Terminal, Collins and Aikman, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, Great Western Sugar, Vanadium Steel and Republic Steel.

Southwestern rail issues were again active on merger rumors, but a splendid demand also developed for some of the seasoned dividend paying shares. Canadian Pacific was bid up 5 points to 192, the highest price since 1916.

The first sale of Pan-American Western B stock, after announcement of the United States Supreme court decision against the Doheny interests in the Elk Hills lease case, showed a net decline of 3 points.

Bamboo Acclaimed as Most Valuable Plant

There has lately been an inquiry into the question, What is the most useful plant in the world? and the prize has gone to the bamboo. It is said that the East, South Africa and the West Indies could not exist without it.

"The bamboo is a hollow reed which may grow a few feet high or a hundred. Sometimes its stem is round, sometimes square, and the square kind is very useful for ladders or scaffolding. All sorts of things, massive or delicate, are made from the stems. Houses are built of them, and they make water pipes and ships' masts, beds and tables, prison cages for criminals, handles for agricultural implements, penholders, umbrellas and rods for bad boys. The young roots make good food, and so do the seeds, which may be cooked like rice or used for a beverage, while the leaves can be used for thatching or weaving into clothes and mats. Verily, few plants do so many things for man.

Why Salesmen Age

A Kansas City woman bought a compass for a Christmas gift for her husband. Next morning she took it back to the store, complaining that there was something the matter with it. "You see," she explained, "it points in the same direction all the time, no matter which way you turn it." "It ought to do that, madam," said the salesman, "it should point to the north all the"—

"But I don't want that kind of a compass. I want one that will point east when we are driving east and west when"— According to Capper's Weekly, the salesman was reported late in the day to be "doing as well as could be expected."

Odd Things Done at Fires

Excitable persons who at a fire have thrown valuable mirrors out the window and carried out pillows may find condolence in the action of an Australian who braved the danger of a blaze in a saloon to throw several dozens bottles of liquor out the window onto a paved highway. More recently a nearby blacksmith shop burned, and the same fire hero ran to the shop and emerged with a heavy object in his arms. "I had to save it," he said. "It was the poor man's living." Then he dropped an anvil on the ground.

Xerxes' Mighty Army

Xerxes, the Persian king, used odd method to count his soldiers fore the battle of Thermopylae in B. C. He had the greatest army invasion that ever had been seen the earth when he moved against t Greeks. He wanted to know how fighting men there were, so he 10,000 of them counted and they w huddled into as dense a mass as p sible and a wall was built around space they occupied. Then the wh army entered the enclosure in deta ments so that the number of time was filled, multiplied by 10,000, approximately the total of the inv ing forces. This figure, according Herodotus, was 1,700,000 foot sold and 80,000 cavalry. With attend and the sailors and soldiers of fleet added, he brought the total up 2,317,000.

Hit or miss methods are seldom of value in any undertaking; in the accumulation of money they are fatal.

Andrew Carnegie expressed it tersely and completely when he said: "The best way to accumulate money is to resolutely save a fixed portion of your income no matter how small the amount."

Putting money in a savings account regularly is nothing more or less than a habit, and it is a habit that pays splendid dividends.

The AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

PARIS MAKES ROOM FOR LEGIONNAIRES

Splendid co-operation of the French government officials has made it possible to complete practically all arrangements for the ninth annual convention of the American Legion to be held in Paris next September, Albert Greenlaw, Augusta, Maine, resident member of the France convention committee, in the French capital, reported upon his arrival recently at national headquarters of the Legion in Indianapolis, Ind.

Use of the Palace Trocadero, famous exhibition building in Paris, for the business sessions of the 1927 convention has been authorized by the French government and the Hotel Palais d' Orsay, one of the finest in Europe, has been obtained for the headquarters of "40 and 8," the play society of the Legion. A goal of 20,000 rooms has been reached and every American Legionnaire going abroad for the convention is assured a clean comfortable room at a price from $10 to $15 per person for the convention week. Eventually 30,000 rooms will be inspected and set aside for the Legionnaires, the France convention committee member reported after his stay in Paris.

Albert Greenlaw.

Arrangements have been completed for Paris to close shop and observe the day of the big American Legion parade through the streets of the French capitol next September as a holiday. The parade of the American and French veterans of the World war will be staged on September 20. The parade will be officially sponsored by the highest military and civilian authorities. Marshal Foch, supreme commander of the allied forces, and General Gouraud, military governor of Paris, have expressed their willingness to assist. Gen. John J. Pershing, wartime commander of the A. E. F., and Howard P. Savage, national commander of the Legion, have made reservations for the France trip and will be in the reviewing stand.

"With reservations coming into national headquarters in a steady stream and a definite quota assigned to each state in the movement, there will be many Legionnaires bitterly disappointed by not being able to obtain a place in the Paris movement unless they get their reservation in at the earliest possible moment," Bowman Elder, Indianapolis, national chairman of the France convention committee, advises. A department France convention officer has been appointed in each state to represent the Legion in helping veterans make their applications for reservation. All applications must come through the department France convention officer.

Great Fleet Will Carry Legionnaires to Paris

The fleet of 28 great ocean liners that will carry members of the Legion to Paris for their convention will be led by the Leviathan, flagship of the movement and the greatest steamship afloat. The Leviathan has an interesting war record. She was the Vaterland, pride of the German nation, prior to the war. She was seized by the United States government and christened the Leviathan after being outfitted as a troop transport. The Leviathan carried nearly 40,000 men to France and return, sometimes taking as many as 10,000 on a trip.

Welfare Division Called Upon to Help Children

The number of children of dead or disabled war veterans referred to The American Legion's National Child Welfare Division in Indianapolis, Ind., for aid per month has increased more than 400 per cent in the last year, James F. Barton, national adjutant of the Legion, announced recently.

In December, 1925, aid was asked for 28 children. In January, 1926, 44 appeals reached national headquarters. The number rose to 53 in April; 90 in August; 99 in November, and passed the hundred mark in December.

City Directory Issued for 1927

New Directory Combines Five Distinct Directories—Methods by Which Information May be Acquired Easily.

The 1927 edition of the city directory has just been issued by the Price & Lee Company and is one of the most modern directories ever issued by that concern. The directory combines five distinct directories: A directory of the city; county, state and federal officers; a buyers' directory; an alphabetical directory listing the names, occupations and addresses of residents; a numerical directory giving streets, householders' and business addresses; and a classified directory listing the business, professional and social interests of the city.

Every effort has been made to make the book authoritative and up-to-date, and as usual everyone who has to consult a directory will find it an invaluable source of information. In the back of the book will also be found a map of the city showing the location of every street.

In addition to listing the names of residents in alphabetical order there is a special section on pink paper in the back of the book listing the streets, together with those living on each street. Householders who have a telephone have that fact indicated by a star in front of the name. This makes it an easy matter if one desires to get in touch with someone who has no telephone, to look it up in the directory and see who lives nearby who has a 'phone.

The directory is the most compete that Price & Lee have issued.

Old Tower Once Home of Distinguished Men

At Islington is the Canonbury tower. It has the double attraction of a great age and of association of famous and well-loved people. Francis Bacon lived here for nine years in the early part of the Seventeenth century, when it was called "Canonbury house." One of the upper rooms has his name and a Latin inscription over the doors. Charles Lamb, who lived near by at 64 Duncan terrace, and Washington Irving, before he went for his three years' visit to Spain, rambled over the old tower.

The most interesting thing about this old tower is that Oliver Goldsmith wrote "The Vicar of Wakefield" here when he had taken refuge from his creditors in the lodgings of his friend, Newberry, the bookseller, but any small boy who inspects the tower will decide in favor of the Compton room, where he will ignore the lovely paneling to inspect the very bullet, embedded in the wall, that was aimed at Sir Walter Raleigh.

All Food to Ostrich

A zoo ostrich nearly lost its life in an effort to swallow five yards of stout rope. When the keeper made the discovery more than half the rope, which had been inadvertently left in the cage by a painter, had disappeared down the bird's throat. The keeper, seeing that the bird was in difficulties, decided to relieve it of its five-yard meal. Owing, however, to the efforts of the ostrich to kick him away, the task was difficult. By long and steady pulling, however, the keeper eventually recovered the rope. Ostriches are not at all particular what they devour. One at the zoo recently swallowed a boy scout's hat without any ill effects.—London Tit-Bits.

Keys to Ancient Cities

When the mayor of a city today presents a "key to the city" to a distinguished visitor, it means nothing more than an expression of good will, but there was a time when it meant actual access to a city. That was in the days when European cities were surrounded by walls. When such a city was surrendered the keys of the gates were turned over to the conquerors. Gates usually were closed at nightfall and if a distinguished visitor wanted to go and come as he pleased he was entrusted with the key. It is upon this ancient custom that the modern ceremony is based.—Pathfinder Magazine.

A chucking reamer cuts both on the end and side and may remove from 1-64 to 1-32 inch of metal, according to its size and the accuracy required.—Popular Science Monthly.
